Two Houses of Congress

The Constitution creates a bicameral legislature for three reasons:

Historical: The British Parliament consisted of two houses since the 1300s, and many colonial assemblies were similar in form.

Practical: A bicameral legislature was necessary to compromise the Virginia and New Jersey plans of representation.

Theoretical: The Framers favored a bicameral Congress in order that one house might act as a check on the other.

Terms

A term is the length of time that officials serve after an election, as in a two- or six-year term.

The date for the start of each new term has been set by the Twentieth Amendment (1933) as “noon of the 3d day of January” of every odd-numbered year.

Sessions of Congress

A session is the regular period of time during which Congress conducts business.

- Congress adjourns, or suspends until the next session, each regular session as it sees fit.
- If necessary, the President has the power to prorogue, or adjourn, a session, but only when the two houses cannot agree on a date for adjournment.
- Only the President may call Congress into a special session—a meeting to deal with some emergency situation.

The House of Representatives

- What are the size and terms of the House of Representatives?
- How are House seats reapportioned among the States after each census?
- How can we describe a typical congressional election and congressional district?
- What are the formal and informal qualifications for serving in the House?

Size and Terms

- The exact size of the House of Representatives, currently at 435 members, is determined by Congress.
- The Constitution provides that the total number of seats in the House shall be apportioned (distributed) among the States on the basis of their respective populations.
- Members of the House of Representatives serve two-year terms.
- Although there have been recent movements to limit terms, there are no limits set on the number of terms a representative may serve.

Reapportionment

Article I of the Constitution directs Congress to reapportion—redistribute—the seats in the House after each decennial census.

- As the United States grew in population, the number of representatives in the House also grew.
- The Reapportionment Act of 1929 set the “permanent” size of the House at 435 members, and provided for “automatic reapportionment.”

Districts and Gerrymandering

- Under the single-member district arrangement, the voter's in each district elect one of the State's representatives.
- The general-ticket system, no longer in use, provided that all of a State's seats were filled at-large.
- Districts that have unusual shapes or even defy description have sometimes been gerrymandered.
- Gerrymandering refers to the act of drawing congressional districts to the advantage of the political party that controls the State legislature.

- Originally, the Constitution provided that senators were chosen by the State legislatures.
- In 1912 the Seventeenth Amendment was passed and called for the popular election of senators.
- Senators serve for six-year terms.
- The Senate is a continuous body, meaning that all of its seats are never up for election at the same time.

Representatives of the People

Senators and representatives are elected to represent people. As legislators, they have four voting options:

Trustees Trustees believe that each question they face must be decided on its merits.	Delegates Delegates see themselves as agents of the people who elected them.
Partisans Lawmakers who owe their first allegiance to their political party are partisans.	Politicos Politicos attempt to combine the basic elements of the trustee, delegate, and partisan roles.

Committee Membership and Public Servants

- As committee members, senators and representatives screen proposed laws before they are voted on.
- Another vital part of their committee work involves the oversight function.
- Oversight is the the process by which Congress, through its committees, checks to see that the agencies of the executive branch are working effectively.
- Members of the House and the Senate also act as servants of their constituents.
- Requests from voters vary widely, and members of Congress take heed to many of them. Ignoring their constituencies would not bode well in the next election.

Compensation

- Today, senators and representatives are paid a salary of $141,300 a year. Certain members, such as the Speaker of the House and the Senate's president pro tem, are paid more.
- The franking privilege allows members of Congress to mail letters and other materials postage-free by substituting their facsimile signature (frank) for the postage.
- The Constitution says that Congress fixes its own “compensation.” Therefore, the only real limits to congressional pay are the President's veto and fear of voter backlash against a pay increase.

Membership Privileges

- Members of Congress are immune from arrest for noncriminal offenses while engaged in congressional business.
- More importantly, the Speech and Debate Clause (Article I, Section 6, Clause 1) protects representatives and senators from suits for libel or slander arising from their official conduct.
